about the village

The heritage listed Donnelly River Village is a former timber mill and township. In its 1950s heyday, the village consisted of a steam-driven timber mill, 35 workers cottages, the Mill Club, boarding house, general store, butcher shop, first-aid post, school, sports oval and swimming dam. The mill closed in 1978 and the village now offers accommodation in the renovated cottages that once housed the timber workers families.
